Port-day checklist

Ship time, all-aboard buffers, taxis and what to carry, so a great day ashore ends back on board.

From Saili, the SeaDays otter

Print it or tick it on screen. Rules, times and limits vary by cruise line, ship and port, so your cruise line's own info always has the final say.

Before you leave the ship

- ☐ Find the all-aboard time
Check the daily planner or app. It's usually 30–60 min before the listed departure.
- ☐ Set alarms by ship time
Your phone may switch to local time on its own. The ship often stays on ship time.
- ☐ Pick a hard back-at-the-ship time
Well before all-aboard. That buffer matters more than which beach you pick.
- ☐ Name one timekeeper in your group
- ☐ Tender port? Add extra buffer
Tenders can eat the clock, both going out and coming back.

What to carry

- ☐ The ID and ship card your line asks you to carry
Check your cruise line's rules for going ashore.
- ☐ Small US bills
Many Caribbean ports take dollars, and it makes agreeing a price easier.
- ☐ Water and sun cover
More than you think on hot days.
- ☐ Charged phone and any meds you'll need

Taxis and rides

- ☐ Ask: "Is that per person, or for the car?"
In some ports, fares are quoted per person.

- ☐ Agree it up front
Total price, pickup time and meeting spot, before you leave the port area.
- ☐ Big group? Agree a whole-van price
Plus a hard return time, and pay at the end of the ride.

Tours and rentals

- ☐ Private guide? Ask to change the plan
Many will build the day around what you want, like food or a beach.
- ☐ Compare hours ashore, not just price
Doing it yourself? Check the day pass is available for your date.
- ☐ Renting a golf cart? Film it first
Video walk-around, price and return time in writing, check the brakes and which side they drive on.
- ☐ Small kids? Keep it short
Go early and pick something you can bail on.
- ☐ Don't prepay what you can't refund
Ports do get skipped sometimes, for weather or other reasons.

Heading back

- ☐ Set an alarm to LEAVE the fun spot
Not one to arrive at the ship. Cruise areas can get busy late in the day.

SAILI'S TIP

Plan your day backwards from all-aboard, on ship time.

Can't keep track? Keep this list in SeaDays.
